5. On 6 November, the Flak Kaserne in Leipzig-Schoonau was occupied by about 800 troops. Sentries observed wore red-bordered black epaulets, including some with motor transport insignia, and patrols wore red-bordered black epaulets with artillery insignia. Almost no training was observed in the barracks area. Sixteen troops were constructing field fortifications in the training area south of the installation and a T-34/85 tank practiced driving in the training area north of the installation. Numerous officers were daily seen in restaurants and streets in the morning and afternoon. Officers observed wore artillery insignia and, a few, tank insignia. Little vehicular traffic was observed.

1. [redacted] Comment. For location of the installations in the Leipzig-Gohlis area, northwest of the Leipzig main railroad station, see attached overlay. The barracks installations mentioned are referred to in these reports with the designations indicated in the overlay. Some of these designations do not check with those indicated in the US Installations List. The barracks installations mentioned in the present report are carried occupied as follows:
the Train Kaserne by rear services and repair shop units of the GOFG;
the Treitschke Kaserne by an MVD unit; and the Hindenburg Kaserne by an air force unit, [redacted]

2. [redacted] Comment. Same source, in June 1953, reported the same occupation in the installation mentioned. The unit in the hospital presumably was a motor transport or medical unit, which had been at a training ground during the summer months. [redacted]

3. [redacted] Comment. The Flak Kaserne in Schoenau is carried occupied by a medium AAA regiment of the 13th AAA Div, the 94th Gds RL Regt (US) of the XXIX Gds Mtz Rifle Corps and the 19th Gds Mecz Regt of the 8th Gds Mecz Div. The occupation strength given by the three sources does not correspond with the total strength of these three regiments. As, however, the troops are fairly definitely believed to have returned from the troop training grounds, the sources were probably confused by the little training which, as in previous years was observed during November, and, therefore, underestimated the actual occupation strength.

- 25X1A 4.  Comment. The barracks installation in Heiterblick is assumed to be occupied by the 8th Gds Mtrcl Bn, the unidentified motor transport battalion and the 67th Tank Tng Bn (US), all of the 5th Gds Mecz Div; and a motor vehicle repair shop of the First Gds Mecz Army,  The 67th Tank Tng Bn (US) was repeatedly confirmed in the installation. For information on the total occupation strength, see  Comment 3. 25X1
